U.S. Student Program Information Sheet
For UC Santa Barbara Affiliates
2022-23 Award Cycle

APPLICATION TIMELINE & IMPORTANT DATES

Application Open
Wednesday, March 31, 2021

Fulbright Information Session
Tuesday, April 27, 2021, 1pm Pacific (4pm Eastern)
Register Here

Individual Advising Appointments
See Application Process section for more information
April through August 2021

UCSB Campus Deadline
Current graduate students only
Wednesday, August 25, 2021

Campus Interviews
Current graduate students only
September 7-17, 2021

National Deadline
Tuesday, October 12, 2021, 2pm Pacific (5pm Eastern)

Please read through this entire guide carefully
Fulbright is the flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government and is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. The Fulbright U.S. Student Program is open to students who have earned a Bachelor's degree but not yet earned a doctorate. Applicants must be citizens or nationals of the United States at the time of application; permanent residents are not eligible. (See the website for more information on eligibility.)

The Fulbright U.S. Student Program provides grants for individually designed study/research projects or for English Teaching Assistant Programs to take place during one academic year in a participating country outside the U.S. During their grants, Fulbrighters meet, work, live with, and learn from the people of the host country, sharing daily experiences. Through engagement in the community, the individual will interact with their hosts on a one-to-one basis in an atmosphere of openness, academic integrity, and intellectual freedom, thereby promoting mutual understanding. Grant lengths and dates vary by country, so it’s important to check the country profile page for more details.

Applicants to the U.S. Student Program include:

- Recent graduates (graduating seniors and recent bachelor’s-degree recipients who have some undergraduate preparation and/or direct work or internship experience related to the project)

- Master’s and doctoral candidates (graduate-level candidates who demonstrate the capacity for independent study or research, together with a general knowledge of the history, culture, and current events of the countries to which they are applying)

- Young professionals (including writers, creative and performing artists, journalists, and those in law, business, and other professional fields who have up to 5 years of professional study and/or experience in the field in which they are applying will be considered)

Click here for more information about eligibility, selection criteria, award benefits, and more.
TYPES OF AWARDS

There are two main types of awards in the Fulbright U.S. Student Program:

Open Study/Research Awards

The Fulbright Study/Research Award is the traditional award opportunity where a candidate designs a proposal for a specific country.

English Teaching Assistant (ETA) Awards

The Fulbright English Teaching Assistant programs place grantees in schools overseas to supplement local English language instruction and to provide a native speaker presence in the classrooms.

There are also a number of special programs as well:

- Fulbright-National Geographic Storytelling Fellowship
- Critical Language Enhancement Award
- Fulbright-Fogarty Fellowships in Public Health
- Additional country-specific awards with variable criteria

Please note that the Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad Fellowship Program is administered separately from the Fulbright U.S. Student Program. The Fulbright-Hays competition typically occurs in the winter/spring and the application components and process is quite different from the U.S. Student Program. Check the program website for more information.

Click here to learn more about types of awards.
There are several core application components for the Fulbright U.S. Student Program, with a few differences between types of awards. In addition to completing all required fields, be sure to use all of the space provided to your advantage in order to strengthen the viability of your application. It is also important to not simply reuse material that will appear elsewhere in your application.

1. Biographical Data (personal, professional, academic, occupational, extracurricular, etc.)

2. Program Information (a summary section covering the basic who, what, when, where, why and how of your project)

3. Statement of Grant Purpose (2 pages long for study/research and creative/performing arts grants; 1 page long for ETA grants)

4. Personal Statement (1 page long for all applicants)

5. Affiliation Letter (for study/research and creative/performing arts applicants only, must be from an educational institution or other sponsoring entity in the host country)

6. Foreign Language Forms (variable requirements by country)

7. Letters of Recommendation (3 total)

8. Transcripts (from all institutions where you received a degree or took any coursework for credit)

9. Supplementary Materials (for creative/performing arts applicants only)

For more detailed information and guidance on the application components, visit the Fulbright website.
Depending on the type of award being applied for and the status of the applicant, there are different application processes and resources. However, ALL applicants should do the following:

- Students should review the relevant information on the Fulbright website carefully, including information about application components and the country profile page.

- Students are strongly encouraged to begin their applications early, as it can be time-consuming to secure all of the necessary components and compose a strong application.

- Students should arrange to have an individual advising appointment with one of our campus’ Fulbright advisors: Shawn Warner or Hannah Lawrence.

See below for more information on specific processes.

For Current UCSB Graduate Students

- Graduate students should additionally arrange to have an individual advising appointment with Robby Nadler (campus review committee member and the Director of Academic, Professional, and Technical Graduate Writing Development) to review their application essays.

- Graduate student applicants must submit a complete application, including all letters of recommendation and letter of affiliation, via the online Fulbright application portal by the campus deadline of Wednesday, August 25, 2021 (note: it is the responsibility of the applicant to communicate the importance of this deadline to all of their letter writers).

- Graduate student applicants must participate in the campus interview process, which is tentatively scheduled for September 7-17, 2021 (students will be notified of the exact date and time of their interview slot after the campus deadline).

- The purpose of the campus deadline and campus interview process is two-fold: to allow the applicant to get in-depth feedback on their application to ensure it is in line with the goals of the Fulbright program, and to ensure that the campus review committee (comprised of knowledgeable UCSB faculty and staff) has the necessary information to submit the mandatory Campus Committee Endorsement form to be reviewed by the National Screening Committee.
For UCSB Undergraduates, Recent Alumni, and ETA Applicants

- Current undergraduates, recent alumni, and applicants to the English Teaching Assistant (ETA) programs are NOT required to submit materials by the campus deadline and do not participate in the campus interview process.

- For general questions regarding the application process, you can schedule an individual advising appointment with one of our campus’ Fulbright advisors: Shawn Warner or Hannah Lawrence.

- For support in reviewing application materials, contact Nick Alward-Saxon (Executive Assistant to the Dean of Undergraduate Education) or the Campus Learning Assistance Services Writing Lab.

TIPS & RESOURCES FOR ALL APPLICANTS

Know the Fulbright mission. Fulbright is a cultural exchange and ambassadorship program, so this should be highlighted in your application. For Study/Research applicants, this means that your project proposal should be framed in a way that highlights the benefits to the host country, not just to building a body of academic knowledge. Also bear in mind that this is not a dissertation grant; there is a separate program for that called the Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad Fellowship Program.

Research the specifics of the grant you are applying to. It is of the utmost importance that you familiarize yourself with all of the information on the profile page for the country you are planning to apply to. Every country is different, and there can often be substantial variability in the terms of the grant. Make sure you read all of the country-specific information carefully, as well as ALL of the instructions on the application itself, so that you don’t miss any crucial details that could disqualify you.
Understand what a successful proposal looks like. The application components section on the Fulbright website has lots of great information and tips to help you understand what they are looking for in an application. Because the length of the Fulbright essays is so short (2-3 pages in total, depending on the type of grant), make sure that you use every space on the application to your advantage and do not repeat material you have used elsewhere. It is also advantageous to consult previous successful applications from UCSB to get a sense of what has worked well for applicants in the past.

For Study/Research applicants, it can be useful to structure your 2-page Statement of Grant Purpose in the following way:

- ½ page framing the cultural/societal problem your project seeks to address
- ½ page outlining your project methodology
- ½ page detailing the intended goals, outcomes, and results of your project
- ½ page tying your project back to the initial problem statement from the beginning

Know your audience. Your application will be formally reviewed by at least two different groups of people: the Fulbright National Screening Committee (which is composed of faculty at U.S. institutions) and the Fulbright Commission in the host country to which you are applying (which can be comprised of any combination of scholars, diplomats, and other government officials). It is thus important to write for an educated but non-specialist audience, as your application will be read primarily by people who are not in your discipline.

Other Useful Resources

- Statistics: Find out how many people apply for awards and how many awards are issued for different countries in the three most recent award cycles
- Grantee Directory: Search for Fulbright alum who have held awards to countries of interest (note: while Fulbright does not publish contact information for Fulbright alum, if you are interested in finding ways to reach out to alum, most are open to connecting and happy to help answer questions about their experience with Fulbright)
- Alumni Ambassadors: Want to connect with a Fulbright alumni? Check out the award profiles of Alumni Ambassadors, who are selected annually, to read their bios, learn about their experience with Fulbright, and to get in touch with them (their email addresses are listed)
- Award Search: Find out which awards might be a good fit for you by using search filters such as world region, foreign language proficiency, and accepted degree levels
- Fulbright Webinars: The Fulbright Program offers regular webinars throughout the application season that can provide in-depth information and advice on different parts of the process