

WORKSHOP FEATURING MARY ROBSON

Thursday, January 31, 2019
Designing and Facilitating Interdisciplinary Projects
10 a.m. - 12 p.m.
Mosher Alumni House - Living Room

This workshop is aimed at faculty, researchers and staff who are engaged in interdisciplinary research and teaching that spans the humanities and sciences. Participants will learn ways of facilitating interdisciplinary dialogs and develop plans for current and future projects at UCSB. Refreshments will be provided.

ABOUT MARY ROBSON

Mary Robson is Creative Facilitator to the Institute of Medical Humanities at the University of Durham. Trained as a theater designer, her work includes convening and running research groups of large, interdisciplinary projects, and working with researchers and research participants to make creative outputs: as producer/director of short films, participatory theatre pieces, audio pieces, and arts workshops. She places a particular emphasis on interdisciplinarity and transferable methodology. Mary's recent work as a creative facilitator also includes projects with Exeter University, Trinity College Dublin and Kings College London.

Mary has received a Royal Society of Public Health award for 'innovative and outstanding contributions to arts and health'.
